This stylish bathroom could have come straight from the pages of a high-end European design magazine

With glass, reconstituted stone and glossy vinyl at every turn, it's clear from the moment you step foot into this bathroom that only the very best materials were considered. Combined with first-class design these quality products have resulted in a final product worthy of Europe's elite.

The rich colour scheme is perhaps the most striking element of this space, with the copper and all-white tones creating a sleek effect. Boasting a modern, minimalistic look it's hard to believe this bathroom actually resides in a period-style home. In fact, designer Garrett Hebden of Better Bathrooms & Kitchens had to rectify the walls so they were square before renovations could begin.

The layout has been cleverly executed with the Better Bathrooms & Kitchens' team utilising every inch of available space. Natural sunlight pouring through the windows helps enhance the room's dimensions and gives the bathroom a bright, breezy atmosphere.

Spectacular design elements include a custom-made frameless glass shower with a floor-level entry. More a piece of art than simply a place to get clean, the shower features walls made from toughened moonwalk glass in a soft parchment finish, to blend with the bathroom's neutral aesthetic.

This design is the ultimate example of how form and function can come together to produce a bathroom that's visually appealing while also remaining extremely efficient. K&K
